

KAMPALA T.V SERIES

SYNOPSIS

Ojok is a young brave boy from the village of Abongomola who is exploring his imagination into the little unknown Kampala by the Village people but finds himself caught up in a busy Ugandan Capital where he is faced with lots of different challenges and survival.

His brother Ogwang is sent after him but is taken up by the new lifestyles and fun he encounters while there. This prolongs his stay in town. However, Ojok, was inspired by the beauty of Kampala. His curiosity and need to survive leads him to experimenting with different resources to find a reliable source of energy. It is during this search that he discovers CREEC, a knowledge hub for different sustainable energy sources. His curiosity enables him to become an apprentice for one of the researchers at the centre. He picks up on so many skills and learns how to make energy from waste.

In season 2, Ojok takes life changing idea of clean energy use back to the village, something which is easily adopted by the community.

The first season was successfully completed pending screening with the help of different sponsors and partners, i.e. UBC, CREEC, Ugaroll, Penthouse inn, etc.

FOCUS

The Kampala TV series is aimed at creating awareness for clean energy alternatives that are available for adoption. We shine a light into some of the energy challenges faced by people in the urban community like lack of sustainable energy for powering businesses as well energy for everyday use like cooking and lighting. The biggest factor that hinders people to transition to sustainable forms of energy in the urban community is lack of information. We hope to break this barrier through TV series by not only talking problems around energy in an entertaining way, but also demonstrating the potential of this energy transforming people's lives answers.
